Life After Service

The most complex moment in your career can be the transition to civilian life. This new chapter comes with its own expected, and unexpected, challenges as you join a new workforce, adjust to a new schedule, and determine what this new life stage means for you.

Change can be refreshing, but it can also be a shock to the system, and that can have a meaningful impact on your health.

The changes that come with transitioning to civilian life can be destabilising, and that can have a significant effect on your health and ability to engage with a treatment plan. To provide you with a health care journey that is as complete as possible, we work with trusted Veteran Support Organisations who offer resources and support – whether you are currently transitioning, or are well into your life after the ADF.

Coordinating your care, our helpful staff are able connect you to vetted, trusted and proven support services that compliment your health care.
